

Information Partner

The Organizing Committee offers journals whose topics include coverage of issues planned for discussion at the conference, to become an information partner.

Representatives of magazines (1-2 people) are given the opportunity:

- free participation in all conference events, including plenary and sectional meetings, a round table, a seminar, an exhibition, lunches, coffee breaks, a buffet table, excursions;
- layouts of magazine issues at the registration desk and information desks;
- informing readers and authors about the requirements for publication, expanding the topics of the magazine, etc .;
- to find and attract new subscribers and authors to the cooperation among the target audience.

Logotypes of information partners will be posted on the site and conference materials (program, theses of reports).

In turn, the information partner places on the resources (site, electronic and printed issue of the magazine) the announcement of the conference, and at the end of the event - a press release or a brief overview article.

In order to become an Information Partner, you need to contact the Organizing Committee and get accredited.
